"In your Monday, March 16 issue of The Poitstown Mercury, an editorial appeared announcing with great satisfaction that Americans are drinking less and less and that the trend is towards moderation

"It predicted that the time seems close at hand when the nation as a whole will accept drink for a pleasant experience, a sovereign relaxer that is continually abused only by sick men and fools.

We must have millions of sick men and fools in the land. Mestly fools, who think that by drinking moderately they are perfectly safe. You print an article like this and yet in the same issue report case after case of crime and violence right in Pottstown and all over the United States. In other editorials I have read, you have bemoaned the fact that there is so much crime in the land and wonder what to do about it just as much an alcoholic beverage as anything else. "Here are the official figures: In 1935.

45,228,606 barrels of beer (31 gallon barrels) were produced in the United States. In 1945 86,604,080 barrels were made; in 1949, 88-807,075 barrels were made; and in 1951, the latest figure I can fine, there was produced 88,976,226 barrels. No, as Americans, we are drinking more and more, not less. "As for the merits of moderation, here is what George Crane, noted psychologist and medical writer from Chicago, says. 'As soon as the moderate drinker gets to feeling blue, or has family or financial difficulties, he doubles his previews dose of alcohol and soon is in the excessive stage . . . All this adds up to two challenging facts. Total abstinence is the only safe way . . . and a really smart, intelligent and clever person for his own good and for others, will leave alcohol alone.
